요약 및 평가※

- 최근 우리 경제는 건설업이 부진한 가운데, 미국 관세인상으로 수출도 둔화되면서 경기 전반이 미약한 상태에 머물러 있는 모습
 - 건설투자가 큰 폭의 감소세를 지속한 가운데, 수출도 둔화 흐름을 나타냄.
 - 건설투자의 부진이 내수 회복을 제약하고 있으며, 생산 증가세도 건설업을 중심으로 약화
 - 이와 함께 對미국 자동차 수출이 큰 폭으로 감소하는 등 미국 관세인상의 영향을 크게 받는 부문을 중심으로 수출도 둔화
 - 다만, 반도체 수요가 양호한 흐름을 지속함에 따라 반도체 생산, 수출 및 관련 설비투자도 높은 증가세를 유지
 - 한편, 국내 정국불안이 완화되고 미중 무역합의가 이루어지면서 가계와 기업의 심리지표가 개선되었으나, 대외 불확실성은 여전히 높은 수준을 지속
 - 철강·알루미늄 관세의 추가 인상 및 미중 무역갈등 재점화 우려 등으로 통상 불확실성은 높게 유지됨.

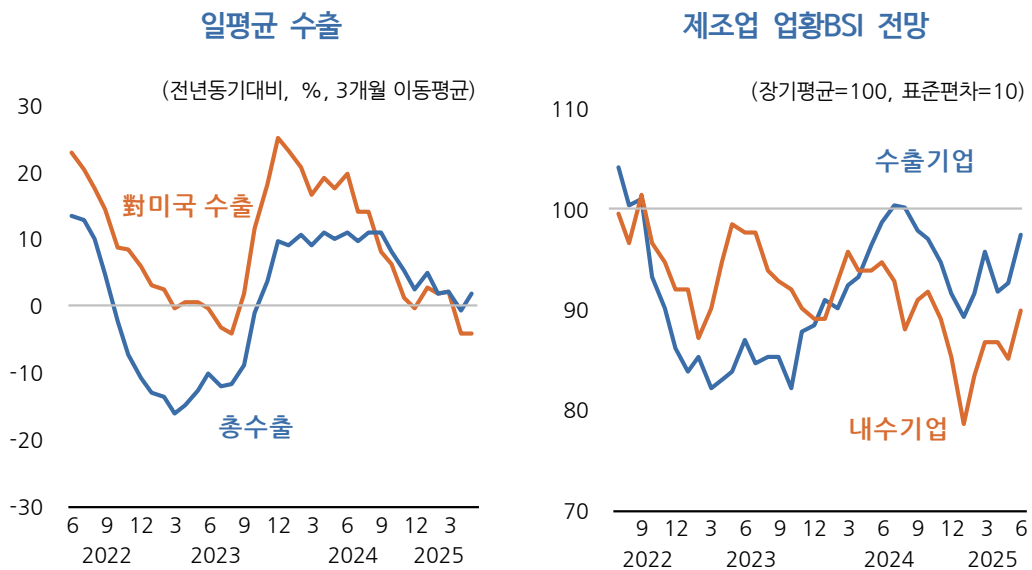

※ 별도의 언급이 없을 경우 모든 증가율은 전년동월대비 기준임.

■ 반도체를 중심으로 제조업생산이 양호한 증가세를 유지하고 있으나, 건설업이 위축된 가운데 수출여건도 악화

Summary and Assessment※

- The Korean economy remains subdued overall, weighed down by continued weakness in the construction sector and a slowdown in exports under the impact of U.S. tariff hikes.
 - Construction investment continued to decline, while exports also showed weakening momentum.
 - Weakness in construction investment is constraining the recovery in domestic demand, while overall production growth is slowing, particularly in the construction sector.
 - Exports weakened further, particularly in sectors more directly affected by U.S. tariffs, as reflected in a decline in motor vehicle exports to the U.S.
 - Meanwhile, persistent strength in semiconductor demand has supported continued robust growth in production, exports, and investment in related equipment.
 - Meanwhile, while household and business sentiment showed modest improvement amid easing domestic political instability and the U.S.-China trade agreement, external uncertainty remains elevated.
 - Trade-related uncertainty continues to run high, driven by further increases in steel and aluminum tariffs and lingering concerns over a potential resurgence of U.S.-China trade tensions.

※ All growth figures are on a year-on-year basis unless otherwise noted. This document is an English translation of the original Korean version. In case of any ambiguities or discrepancies, the Korean version shall prevail.

■ Manufacturing production maintained solid growth, led by semiconductors, but export conditions worsened amid continued weakness in the construction sector.

- In April, all-industry production growth slowed to 0.4% from 0.9% in the previous month, weighed down by continued weakness in construction and a slowdown in services.
 - Industrial production (mining and manufacturing) maintained solid growth (4.4% → 4.9%), supported by continued expansion in semiconductors (20.3% → 21.8%) and an improvement in machinery equipment (-2.3% → 2.4%).
 - However, construction production remained sharply depressed (-16.3% → -20.5%), while the slowdown in services persisted (0.8% → 0.7%), led by declines in financial and insurance services (1.0% → 0.6%) and professional, scientific, and technical activities (3.5% → -0.2%).
- With manufacturing production sustaining relatively strong growth, the inventory-to-shipment ratio (103.2% → 102.3%) declined and the average capacity utilization rate (74.5% → 73.8%) remained high.
 - On a seasonally adjusted month-on-month basis, both shipments for domestic demand (0.5%) and exports (1.2%) increased.

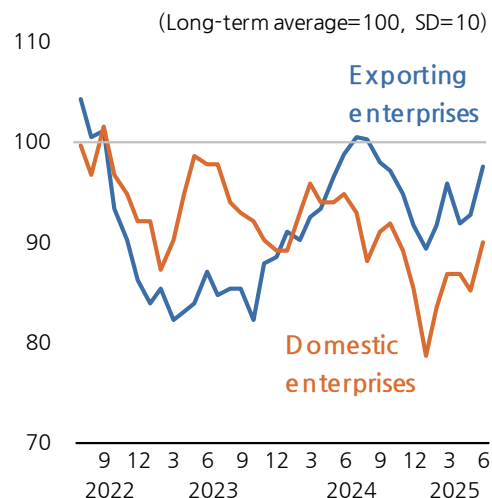

- The recovery of domestic demand remains constrained by sluggish construction investment, while exports have weakened, particularly in items heavily affected by U.S. tariff hikes.
 - Exports to the U.S. continued to decline from the previous month, led by motor vehicles facing elevated tariff rates.
- Household and business sentiment improved amid easing domestic political uncertainty and the U.S.-China trade agreements.
 - The CCSI, which had remained subdued following a sharp decline late last year, recovered to the baseline level, and the BSI outlook also rebounded.
 - However, trade-related uncertainty remains high due to further increases in steel and aluminum tariffs and concerns over a potential resurgence of U.S.-China trade tensions.

Business Conditions Outlook (BSI):

■ Consumption remains subdued, although consumer sentiment appears to be recovering.

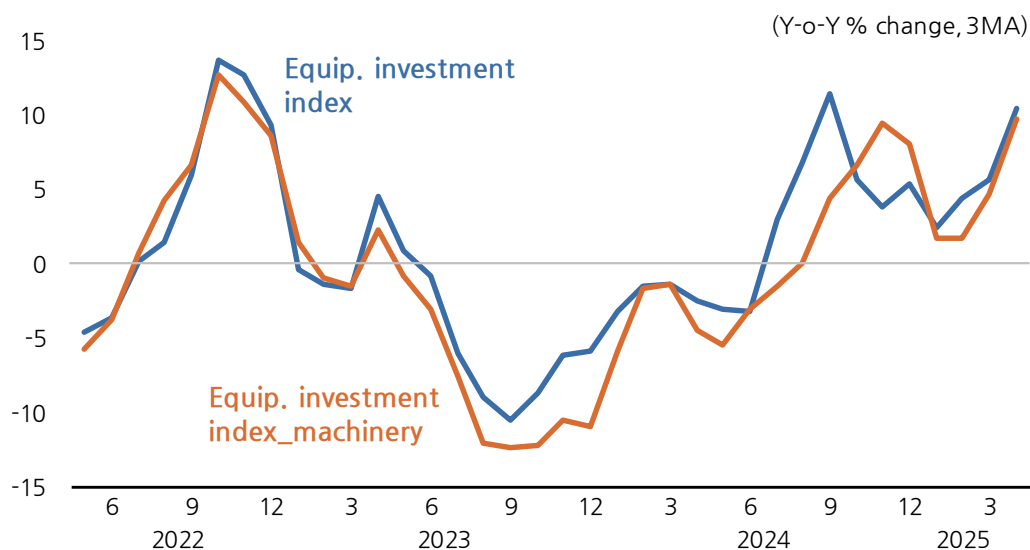

- Despite sustained strong growth in passenger vehicle sales, sluggish performance in other retail categories suggests a continued delay in the overall recovery of goods consumption.
 - Passenger car sales sustained a robust 16.3% increase in April, supported by the ongoing effects of the excise tax cut.
 - In contrast, retail sales excluding passenger cars declined by 1.9%, reflecting broad-based weakness across major categories, including household electrical appliances (-8.7%), furniture (-9.1%), and apparel (-7.9%).
 - As a result, total retail sales posted a slight decline (-0.1%).
- Service consumption continued to post limited gains, led by accommodation and food services.
 - Production in major consumption-related service sectors, such as accommodation and food services (-2.5%) and education (-0.9%), continued to show sluggishness.
- However, the May CCSI rose to 101.8, exceeding the baseline level of 100, signaling an easing in the contraction of consumer sentiment that had persisted since December of last year.
 - This improvement, coupled with a softening high interest rate stance, could serve as a supportive factor for consumption going forward.

■ Equipment investment maintains favorable momentum, supported by strong gains in semiconductor-related and transport equipment investment, while weakness persists in other areas.

- In April, equipment investment growth remained elevated (14.5% → 8.4%), with semiconductor-related investment continuing steady growth and transport equipment investment showing improvement.
 - Semiconductor-related investment, including semiconductor manufacturing equipment (70.6% → 15.6%) and precision instruments (16.6% → 14.5%), showed solid performance.
 - Transport equipment investment (8.9% → 19.8%) also posted strong growth, as motor vehicles (11.2% → 17.8%) continued to rise and other transport equipment (-3.9% → 18.8%) rebounded sharply.
 - Machinery imports in May, a leading indicator, also increased (12.1% → 13.4%), led by transport equipment (10.9% → 34.1%) and semiconductor manufacturing equipment (26.8% → 26.1%), suggesting continued strength in related equipment investment.
- By contrast, equipment investment excluding semiconductors and transport equipment remained sluggish.
 - Machinery investment excluding semiconductors declined across categories: general industrial machinery (2.6% → -5.8%), electrical and electronic equipment (2.5% → -0.7%), and other machinery (1.8% → -3.5%).
 - May machinery imports excluding semiconductors and transport equipment declined (5.3% → -11.4%), suggesting the possibility of continued weakness in machinery investment outside the semiconductor sector.

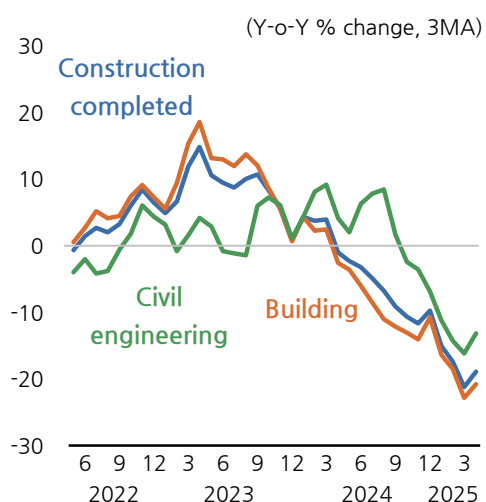

Equipment Investment Index

■ Construction investment is showing further signs of deterioration, yet improvements in some leading indicators suggest the possibility of a future recovery.

- In April, the value of construction completed fell by 20.5%, widening from a 16.3% decline in the previous month.
 - The value of construction completed has declined for 12 consecutive months, reflecting contraction in the sector.
 - By sector, building construction (-16.6% → -23.0%) remained weak across both residential and non-residential segments, while civil engineering (-15.7% → -12.6%) saw a notable decline, driven by reduced activity in electrical machinery and plant construction.
 - However, some leading indicators showed modest improvements, signaling that the weakness in construction investment may gradually ease going forward.
 - The recovery in construction orders received and floor area of buildings commenced (floor area commenced) may be reflected in construction investment with a time lag.
 - The business conditions BSI for construction, although still below its long-term average (64), has shown gradual improvement since March.
- * Construction business conditions outlook (BSI): (Mar.) 43 → (Apr.) 46 → (May) 47 → (Jun.) 51

■ Exports remain on a weakening trend, amid the negative impact of U.S. tariff increases.

- In May, exports declined slightly by 1.3%, while average daily exports posted a modest gain of 1.0%.

- By item, ICT exports (8.7%→17.0%, average daily basis) performed well, led by semiconductors, whereas non-ICT exports remained weak amid slowing global demand.

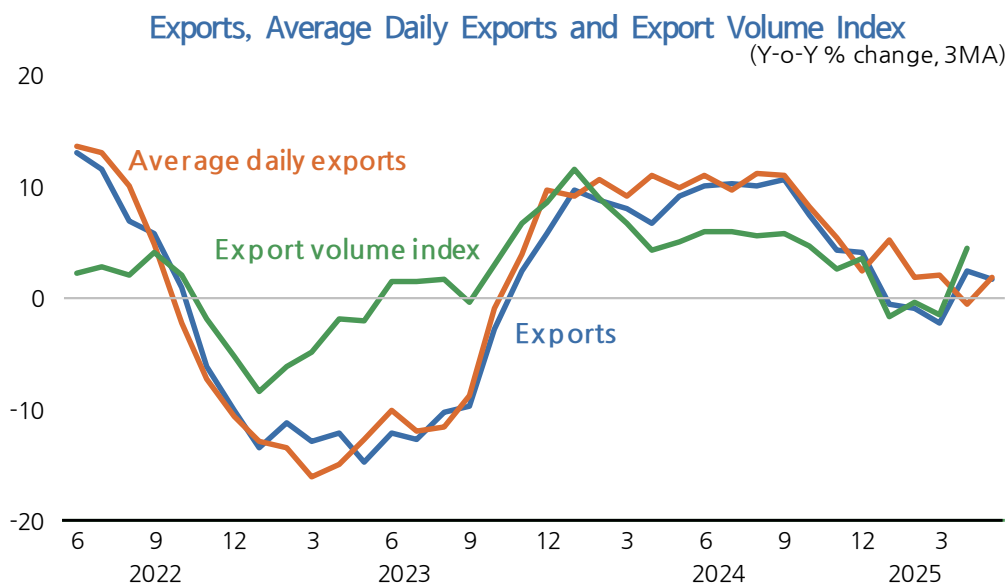

- * Average daily exports, excl. ICT items (3-month moving average, %): (Mar.) -0.7 → (Apr.) -2.7 → (May) -2.3

- Weakness was particularly pronounced in sectors more significantly affected by U.S. tariff increases.

- Exports to the U.S. declined (-8.1%), alongside shipments to China (-8.4%) and Latin America (-11.6%), both subject to elevated tariff rates.

- Motor vehicle exports to the U.S. dropped sharply (-32.0%), reflecting their direct exposure to steep tariff hikes. In addition, further increases in steel and aluminum tariffs (25%→50%, effective June 4) have further worsened export conditions.

- Imports declined markedly by 5.3%, driven primarily by a sharp drop in major energy resources (-15.3%), while the trade balance posted a surplus of 6.94 billion dollars.

■ Employment growth was modest, as weakness in the construction and manufacturing sectors persisted.

- In April, the number of employed persons rose by 194,000, similar to the previous month (193,000), as gains in services were offset by continued sluggishness in construction and manufacturing.

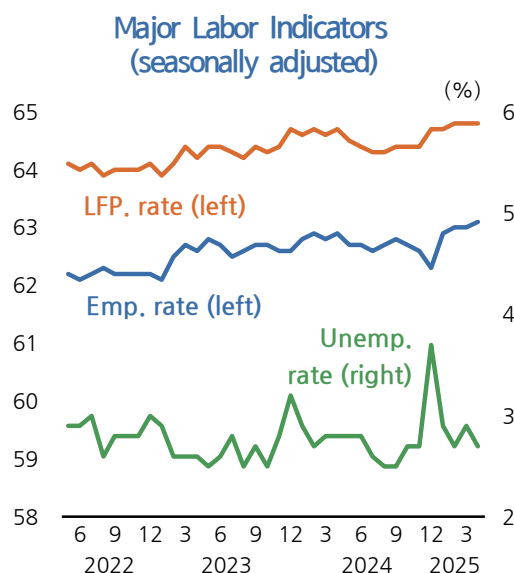

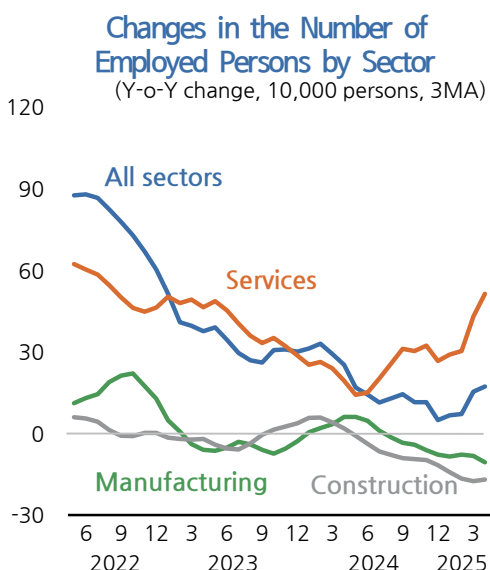

- Services (553,000 → 597,000) posted solid employment gains, led by continued strong growth in human health and social work activities (212,000 → 218,000), along with notable increases in professional, scientific, and technical activities (37,000 → 113,000) and education (30,000 → 68,000).
- However, employment in construction (-185,000 → -150,000) and manufacturing (-112,000 → -124,000) remained weak, resulting in a modest net increase of only 41,000 when excluding sectors closely tied to government-supported jobs.*

* Refers to temporary workers aged 65 and over in public administration and human health and social work activities.

- In addition, the number of workers employed for 18 hours or more per week fell further in May (-81,000 → -90,000), following a decline in the previous month, suggesting a deterioration in labor market conditions.

- Meanwhile, labor market conditions for youth showed some improvement.

- The seasonally adjusted employment rate for those aged 15-29 rose to 45.4% from 44.9% in the previous month, while the unemployment rate declined to 6.4% from 6.6%.
- Accordingly, the seasonally adjusted employment rate for those aged 15 and over edged up to 63.1% from 63.0% in the previous month, while the unemployment rate fell to 2.7% from 2.9%.

■ While supply-side price pressures have somewhat eased, overall price conditions remain broadly stable.

● In May, consumer prices rose by 1.9%, slightly down from 2.1% in the previous month.

– Agricultural product prices declined further ($-1.5\% \rightarrow -4.7\%$) following the temporary expansion of the government's agricultural discount support program.

– Despite a reduction in fuel tax cuts, petroleum product prices continued to fall ($-1.7\% \rightarrow -2.3\%$) driven by declining international oil prices and exchange rates.

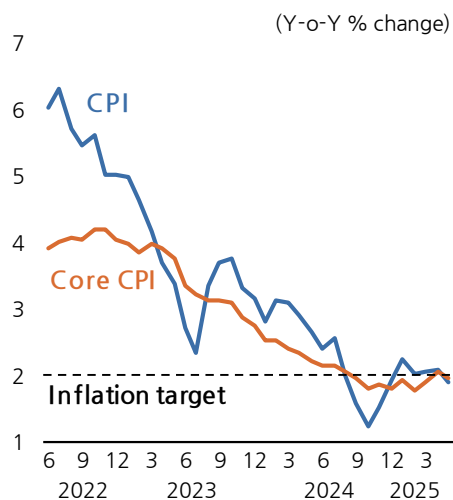

* Dubai crude oil (\$/barrel): (Mar.) 72.5 $\rightarrow$ (Apr.) 67.7 $\rightarrow$ (May) 63.7

* USD/KRW exchange rate: (Mar.) 1,457.0 $\rightarrow$ (Apr.) 1,444.3 $\rightarrow$ (May) 1,394.5

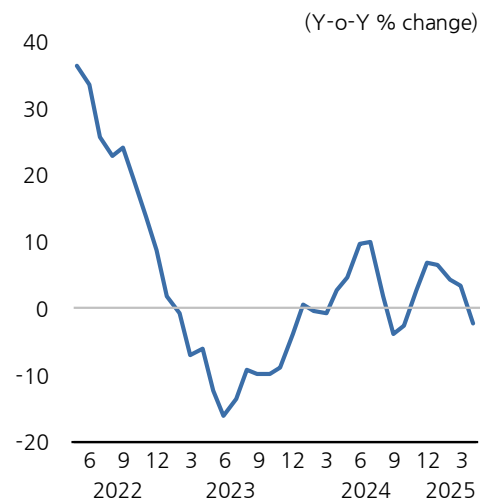

● Core inflation ($2.1\% \rightarrow 2.0\%$) remained largely unchanged from the previous month, as domestic demand stayed subdued.

– Meanwhile, with crude oil-driven import prices declining recently, inflation expectations ($2.8\% \rightarrow 2.6\%$) also fell, potentially exerting downward pressure on prices.

CPI and Core CPI Change

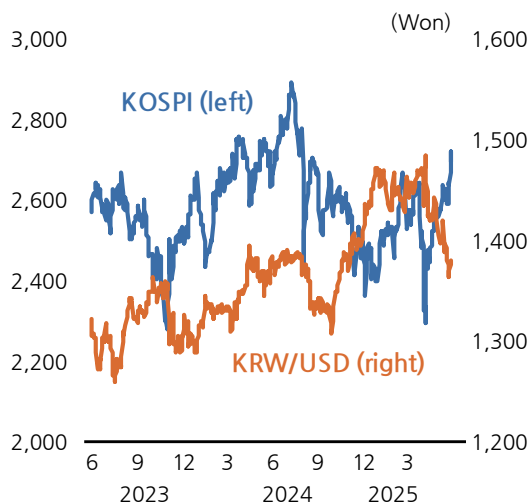

Import Price (Won Basis) Change

■ Financial markets showed broad signs of stabilization as trade tensions between the U.S. and China partially eased.

- Following the trade agreement between the U.S. and China, the KOSPI rose by 5.5% in May, while stock market volatility also declined.
 - The KOSPI 200 volatility index (monthly average, 26.9→19.7), which had surged due to concerns over U.S. trade policy, decreased.
- Credit markets also remained stable, as CP spreads (44bp→28bp) and CDS premiums (32.3→28.8) narrowed.
- The Korean won appreciated by 2.9% against the U.S. dollar, reflecting dollar weakness amid concerns over a widening U.S. fiscal deficit.
- Meanwhile, amid continued weakness in domestic demand, delinquency rates on sole proprietorship business loans and household credit loans in March continued to rise, remaining above their long-run averages.

■ The implementation of housing market regulations in Seoul led to a slowdown in sales price growth and a decline in sales transaction volumes in the capital area, while housing market conditions in non-capital areas remained weak.

- In April, housing sales prices (month-on-month, 0.01% → -0.02%) posted a slight decline.
 - Jeonse prices (0.03% → 0.00%) remained flat, while monthly rent prices (0.09% → 0.05%) continued to post modest gains.
- In Seoul, the expansion of land transaction permission zones (March 24) significantly slowed the pace of sales price growth and reduced sales transaction volumes compared to the previous month.
 - Sales price growth in Seoul (0.52% → 0.25%) decelerated notably, while transaction volumes (12,000 units) also declined from the previous month (12,900 units).
 - Accordingly, sales price growth in the capital region (0.15% → 0.07%) slowed, and transaction volumes (33,800 units) remained below the previous month's level (35,600 units).
- In non-capital areas, the housing market remained sluggish, as demonstrated by continued declines in sales prices and a persistent increase in unsold completed housing units.
 - Since the second half of 2023, sales prices in non-capital areas (-0.12% → -0.11%) have continued to fall, while the number of unsold completed housing units (25,100 → 26,400) has increased, particularly in non-capital areas.

■ Global financial markets stabilized following the U.S.-China trade agreement; however, downward economic pressures remain elevated in major economies amid continued global trade-related uncertainties.

- World industrial production posted moderate growth, led by China and other Asian economies, but goods trade has been gradually contracting due to worsening trade conditions stemming from rapid increases in U.S. tariffs.
